FINDINGS:

The Third Division of the Adjustment Board, upon the whole record and all the evidence, finds that:

The carrier or carriers and the employee or employees involved in this dispute are respectively carrier and employee within the meaning of the Railway Labor Act, as approved June 21, 1934.

This Division of the Adjustment Board has jurisdiction over the dispute involved herein.

Parties to said dispute were given due notice of hearing thereon.

On July 23, 1996 Claimant was operating a gallion crane. Two Trackmen were instructed to gather six kegs of spikes. A length of rail was laying over several kegs of spikes. Claimant used the crane's hook to raise the rail. The Trackmen were retrieving the kegs of spikes when the hook slipped and fell, injuring the Trackmen.

On July 25, 1996 the Carrier instructed the Claimant to attend an Investigation on August 1, 1996. The notice charged him with gross negligence, carelessness, failure to perform his duties safely and properly, creating an unsafe condition, and failure to follow instructions. The Investigation was held, as scheduled. On August 16, 1996 the Carrier notified the Claimant that he had been found guilty of the charges and was suspended for 30 days and disqualified from operating machinery for one year.

The dispute turns on whether the Carrier proved the charges by substantial evidence. The mere fact of an accident does not establish an employee's culpability. The Carrier contends, "The violation was two-fold: 1) [Claimant] failed to properly secure the rail with rail tongs (dogs) instead of a hook, and 2) he allowed the Trackmen to work underneath the rail while it was suspended by the crane."

There is no dispute that the Claimant used the hook instead of the rail tongs to secure the rail. However, there was evidence that, because of the way in which the rail was situated, the rail tongs could not be used or could not be used safely. Although the Roadmaster testified that the Claimant should have used the rail tongs instead of the hook, he did not address the way in which the rail was situated, and the Carrier introduced no evidence to show that under the circumstances presented the rail tongs could have been used and could have been used safely. Accordingly, we are unable to find substantial evidence that the Claimant acted improperly in forgoing the rail tongs for the hook.

The Claimant testified that when operating the crane, he could not see if the Trackmen were working under the suspended rail. There is no evidence that the Claimant allowed the Trackmen to work underneath the suspended rail or had any responsibility for where the Trackmen positioned themselves. The Claimant testified that he was instructed to use the crane to lift the rail. There is no evidence that in following such instruction, the Claimant was culpably responsible for the injuries sustained by the Trackmen. Accordingly, we find that the Carrier failed to prove the charges by substantial evidence.

AWARD
